A UNIVERSAL PROGRESS.

Governments Everywhere Are Conducted for the People.

No one can observe with other eyes than those of a fool the trend of progress and not perceive that elsewhere than in the United States men are coming to the conclusion that modern conditions and modern industrial concentration have rendered useless the old theories of government, and that for the illus modern conditions create, two things must be done:

First, to substitute the interest of the community for the interest of the fortunate or powerful individual;

Second, to restrain greed, not by regulating it, but by making impossible some of its most obvious and dangerous operations.—Charles Edward Russell in “Soldiers of the Common Good,” in the January Everybody’s.

A Tale of the Pioneer Northwest.

The story of the pioneer is one of the finest traditions in our history—a story more moving, more impressive, more dramatic than the story of war and conquest, of the soldier, the pirate, or the adventurer.
In “Carl” by Ade Melvin in the January McClure’s, we have one of the rare instances where the spirit of the pioneer struggle has been given a faithful and adequate expression. It is the story of a fourteen-year-old boy who, after the death of his parents, engages in a heroic struggle to hold the homestead which they had taken up in the Northwestern wilderness, and care for four younger brothers and sisters.
The noble simplicity of the narrative gives it a distinction far above that of average magazine fiction.

How to Cut Chilblains.

To enjoy freedom from chilblains, John Kemp of East Orfield, Me., “apply Buckley’s Arnica Salve. Have also used it for salt shams with excellent results.” Guaranteed to cure festivities, indolent ulcers, piles, burns, wounds, frost bites and skin diseases.
See at Red Cross pharmacy.
